854 carrying a baby or small child is astride the [855] hips held by a cotton cloth or mastate (see Bark Cloth) strip. One never sees a baby
[856] crawl and they are given anything they cry
863 for. It is interesting to note that habits in connection with excretion are taught practically from birth. The child is taken out of the house and held up while he does his needs. He is not allowed to do so on a lap nor in the dwelling itself.

593 The family is very close. It is not unusual 854 to see a mother put her arm around a son, or a father lie in a hammock with his small children beside him. Parents pay attention to personal details, such as wiping a child's nose or 264 washing its face. There are not, however, regular meal hours. One eats when there is [177] food and when one is hungry. The Pacific Cabécar copy the rules of the school and eat three times a day in their own homes.

868 Almost as soon as they can walk, both sexes are taught to swim and help to make fires, using the fire fan and blowing. Girls are taught [864] to pull their skirts between their legs when sitting on the low benches or on the ground before the hearth. At the age of seven, they begin to clean the house, cut fire wood, and cook. The boys cut wood, fish, and hunt, using small arrows for training. When the adults are out in the fields or hunting, children up to ten years old stay at home to tend the fire and to work about the house. Parents also 867 are responsible for teaching tribal customs, for example: the clans with which one can marry;
[788] tabus; the baptism of one's self with salt water when seeing the sea for the first time,[104] etc.

[877] In Talamanca and Chirripó, there is no school and all lore is learned by word of mouth on rainy nights around the hearth. "Study" is [756] restricted to those preparing to be medicine men (see The Medicine Man), who must undergo a severe apprenticeship, or in a less [767] lengthy manner to those who want to have some connection with the handling of the dead (see Death). Games are limited and simple.
857 Small children take pebbles or grass in their [524] toes and try to place them in a straight line. Often they play with mud daubers' nests or similar objects connected with their environ-
● [526] ment. Boys play at marksmanship with a bow,

857 arrow, or blow gun. A favorite pasttime for [526] both sexes is to tie a vine to a log and swing it, jumping as with a rope.

872 On the Pacific side, both sexes go to grange schools when they reach the age of seven and continue for from four to six grades, depending upon the location. Besides Spanish, the official language of Costa Rica, first year teaching is carried out in the mother tongue. Ball games, swings, and see-saws, sewing, cooking, and manual training form an important part of the program. Attention is also paid to hygienic customs. In Cabagra, reading and sewing [871] classes for adults have been started.

582 Marriage. The matrilineal clan, the dominant
[614] social organization of both these peoples (see Social Organization), controls marriage possibilities as one cannot form a union within a blood group related to one's mother. The con-594 trol of the family falls to the mother if she is 562 alive. Even the men respect her and cases have been known where the mother has beaten male 595 members. It is also important to remember that four wives are permitted (see Myths: Cacao). This is a practise followed on both [184] sides of the range although it is as yet unseen
[582] among the youth of the Pacific slope. As a rule, a man marries sisters. The first wife is always the head of the family and can rule the others.

584 Courtship is relatively simple. In Talamanca and Chirripó the custom, which has almost entirely disappeared, was for the man to go to a house where there was a girl-child and ask for her as a wife saying, however, that he would care for her as a daughter. Then he would cut the wood for cooking, fish, make mastate, in fact, do daily chores for the girl's mother until the child turned twelve or reached puberty. During this intermediary period, the girl would become accustomed to the man and would run to meet him on his visits to [591] receive some little gift. When the time came, he took her to his parents' home. There they lived in the communal house, or, if his father had too many wives with offspring, he built a house apart but at the side of his parents' house.

In 1959, the man visits his prospective wife three times. He asks her parents' permission to marry and, particularly on the Pacific side, he
